By Matt Marshall

From the title track that kicks off this set of nine original tunes, through to its closer, guitarist Tony DoRosario and his band display the spark that indeed often accompanies new beginnings. With an expansive tone that brings to mind the bleeding of a drop of watercolor into paper, Rosario runs off quick, single-noted lines that have equal parts warmth and punch. There's often a rushing, anxious quality to the record – the rhythm section supplying soft, yet solid backing to the spirited solos from Rosario and saxophonist Geof Bradfield, creating a sense of pulling, a fever to get out and get going.
